WE'RE A LITTLE BIT DIFFERENT

100% OF OUR PROFITS GO TO THE DEVELOPING WORLD.

Profits from every sale go back to a funding partner in the countries where we source our products from. We've made sure your money ends up in the right pockets by scouring the globe to find some of the smartest organisations tackling poverty in the developing world. So sit back and leave us to do the hard work while you feel good—even tomorrow morning.

YOU'RE KICKING BACK AT SHEBEEN, FEELING GOOD BECAUSE YOU KNOW YOU'RE MAKING A DIFFERENCE IN THE DEVELOPING WORLD.

You get what we're on about – profits from the sale of each drink go to a kick-arse program in that drink's country of origin. That fact alone may be enough to quench the thirst of some, but the more curious among you may be wondering: exactly how do we make sure Shebeen's dollars land in the right pockets? Well, we're glad you asked. When it comes to donating the money you choose to spend with us, there's no horsing around.

THE CHOSEN FEW

The single most important thing we do is to make sure your dollars count. In other words, we're only interested in funding organisations poised to drastically improve the quality of life in the developing world.

All of the organisations we support need to meet four essential criteria. Fundees must be: 1) innovative in their approach; 2) effective at what they do; 3) actively measuring their impact; and 4) able to scale up their operations.

INNOVATIVE

Despite 60 years of effort and billions of dollars spent on international aid, third-world poverty remains a massive problem. Globally, 793 million people are unable to read or write and 780 million have no access to clean drinking water. We look for organisations pursuing new ideas and approaches, in hope of generating more cost-effective and better solutions to these persistent problems.

EFFECTIVE (IN THREE WAYS)

- 1. Effectively addresses basic human needs. We back organisations that focus on the fundamentals: access to income, education and healthcare.
- 2. Effective in their operations. We look for organisations with self-sustaining business models who won't need to rely on grants or donations long-term. Once an organisation is self-sustaining we'll direct our funds to another promising organisation, beginning our cycle of funding support again.
- 3. Effective in their use of funding. We want bang for our buck.

MEASURABLE

We need to be absolutely certain that the Shebeen dollars are having a positive impact in the developing world. That's why we only support organisations who are measurement maestros – if organisations aren't measuring their impact they can't prove the benefits of their model, and we aren't interested in investing in them.

SCALABLE

With 2.6 billion people worldwide living on less than $2 a day, wide-reaching solutions are crucial to reducing third-world poverty. We look for cost-effective and easily replicable ideas that have the potential to spread beyond small groups of people to change cities, countries and even entire continents.

HOW WE FIND THEM

We know quite a bit about the developing world, but we're certainly not experts in investing to create impact. To make sure we're backing some of the absolute best organisations in the world we decided to reach out to some of the smartest funders globally.

We draw our fundees from the portfolios of the Draper Richards Foundation, Jasmine Social Investments, The Mulago Foundation, Peery Foundation and Skoll Foundation. We do this because we know they have already put each organisation they fund under the microscope, carefully reviewing their idea, approach, team and potential impact. They also work with fundees to set impact milestones and establish monitoring and evaluation frameworks to track progress. Piggybacking off the expertise and existing work of these funders not only saves us time, but more importantly gives us confidence that the organisations we fund are game-changers.

That said, the organisations we support are just a small sample of the many amazing projects, ideas and people out there making a very big impact in the developing world. Check out the funders we've worked with and explore the other projects they're backing.

UNRESTRICTED FUNDING

We provide unrestricted funding, which means the specific use of our funds is determined by the organisations themselves. We do this for two reasons:

We back nimble, innovative and effective organisations. Unrestricted funding gives them the freedom to respond to new opportunities and changing needs as they arise, instead of leaving them chained to old goals.

We respect our fundees' expertise. We don't tell them how to spend our donations because we trust that they'll know how to use our dollars better than we do.

Unrestricted funding increases organisational efficiency (and therefore impact), but it also means that when we tell you where money is going, it is always indicative. We can't guarantee the specific use of funds without creating unwanted and, in our opinion, unwarranted inefficiencies. Instead, we ask our fundees to report their overall impact on a semi-annual basis, allowing us to report back to our customers, staff and investors on the impact Shebeen creates.
